

Interior of the Rehab building and the Patient Library.

Interior of morgue
and the main Rehab building.
Both areas have been torn down in preparation for the new civil hospital.

The Arizona State Hospital maintained its own morgue. They would hold the deceased until the county coroner arrived to certify the cause of death. It was housed in the same building as the hospital laboratory.

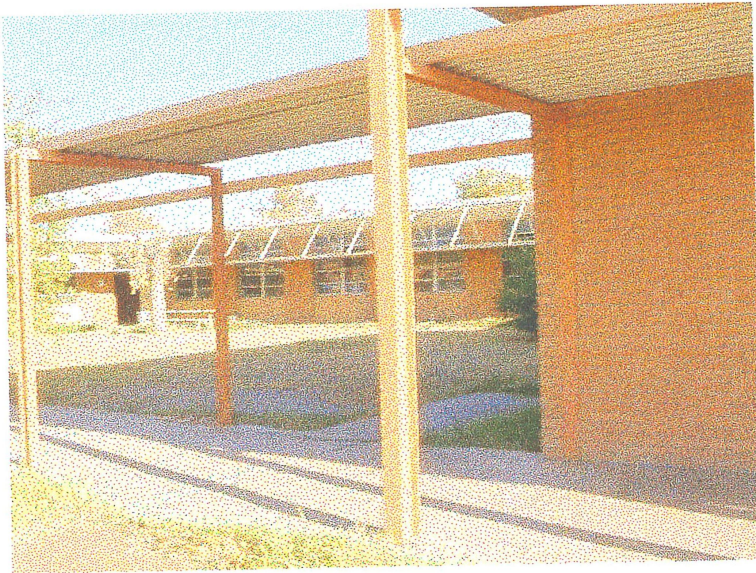

Interior area of the Rehab building on the grounds of the Arizona State Hospital. The Rehab building is due to be demolished around the 18th of September 2000.

This area has seen many patient activities over the years. Dances, groups, ceramics, and socialization activities.

Interior of the rehab building. Many offices were housed in this building for the Rehab therapist, Cota's and OT staff.

Exterior entrance to the Rehab building. Picnic tables were placed around the interior of the front lawn so patients and staff could enjoy the nice outdoor setting.

Back recreation area of the Adolescent Treatment area. The Encanto building was self contained, 16 bed facility that included living area, dining room and school rooms, as well as offices for the support staff.

Entrance of Encanto, old ← ATU unit.
 Courtyard by the old
 Rehab and the old Patient
 Library →

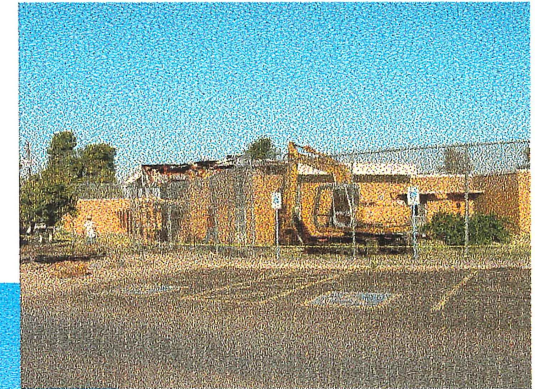

Day room of the ATU
 unit. ↓

ATU yard area. →

ADOA construction committee and the Patient Library before they did the "First hit" to signal the beginning of destruction/construction for the new civil hospital

Old patient Library before they started to tear it down.

DOA Construction board on September 18th, 2000.
Gathering to view the first hit to the patient→
Library in preparation for the new civil hospital.

As the dust and debris settled, It was apparent that we were on a mission to build a new state of the art civil hospital and this was just the beginning of many changes that we will see over the next three years.

Bill Rhode, Chief of Security holds one of the bricks from the old patient library which will be given to Jack Silver, CEO who was unable to attend due to prior commitment.

Demolition of the Patient Library, and Rehab building

Bill Rhode, Chief of Security with the first brick from the Patient Library. This was given to Jack Silver, CEO.

First hit to the old Patient Library in preparation for the new civil hospital

Fillmore cottage in various stage of tear down. September 22, 2000

Fillmore Street cottages being torn down in preparation for the new civil hospital.

One of the cottages on Fillmore being torn down to make room for the new civil hospital. These cottages had many functions in years past. They served as homes for staff, offices for community agencies, Transitional Living Centers, and a Crisis Nursery.

Rear view of cottage being torn down. The demolition of the cottages started on September 14th, 2000

Fence area were construction equipment can access the hospital grounds from the Fillmore area allowing for less disturbance to the activity of the hospital grounds.

This is a view of Fillmore after all of the cottages have been torn down.

Southeast view of the lot, from Fillmore street facing the back of Speciality Clinic.

Lot after the Encanto building was torn down and removed. View shows the ACPTC with the old Administration building in the back ground

This sidewalk is what remains of the old “K” buildings , Patient Library & Rehab.

Work being done by inmates to accommodate the many changes taking place at the hospital.
October 25, 2000

Area in front of power plant being prepared for two more modulares to house Social Services and Security.

October 25, 2000

Demolition of the Patient Library, and Rehab building

Temporary offices for Security, Social Services and other Support services.

When buildings are demolished, they come down in many different stages. Stage one is the preparation of the building, stage two destruction, then clearing away of the rubble.

Modulars being prepared for Security, Social Services and Unit Managers Supervisors and other support staff. They are scheduled to move into these buildings the middle of March 2001.

Inmate labor is used to do a large part of the construction work on grounds. During the time that they are on grounds, they are supervised by Department of Correction Officers as well as Arizona State Hospital Staff.

Continued preparation of the north east lot for the modular. Heavy equipment is used by the inmate labor to level the ground and dig out the foundation.

Inmate labor was used to put in new parking areas, sidewalks, and laying several types of piping to manage the present hospital's needs during this construction period.

By October 25th, 2000, there were several of these piles of demolished buildings to be seen around the fenced area of the hospital grounds.

Debris to be sorted and removed.

Remains of the Encanto building. October 25th, 2000

The lot after the K buildings were removed. St Luke's hospital can be seen in the background.

This view shows the underground tunnels being destroyed. The tunnels housed all of the electrical wires, phone lines, plumbing and other essential items required to run the old hospital. On occasion, we had a client who would find his way into the tunnel “to explore”.(His words”)

The new modulares would face the Clubhouse and the Special Projects building.

During construction, we tried to keep as much of the park like setting as we could.

Three of the buildings being readied for the support staff of the hospital.

Piles of old cement litter the lot of the new hospital while new power equipment is being brought in to be installed for the construction of the new civil hospital.

Piping and Electrical boxes brought in for the new civil hospital.

Patient Library and Rehab center.
Arizona State Hospital.

